

Hope-Camden Road Survey is Finished for Ouachita Co.

Plemmons Completes Line
From East to Nevada
County

CROSS-STATE ROAD

No. 4 Fill Open Up Lower Nevada County to
Through Traffic

The survey has been completed on the Ouachita county end of the Hope-Camden highway, No. 4, according to Saturday's edition of the Camden News.

Announcement was made recently that the Hempstead county end of this road would be pushed through Nevada county as far as Rosston this year. This end of the road is gravelled from Hope to Centerville, on the Hempstead-Nevada county line, a distance of about seven miles. It is graded about eleven miles further into Nevada county, and the dump trucks only four or five miles of reaching Rosston. Present plans are to complete the dump and gravel the entire distance to Rosston.

Beyond Rosston there is not even a surveyor's line across eastern Nevada county, until the Ouachita line is reached.

Route is Started

Western Ouachita county was surveyed this spring as the result of a conference several months ago between District Engineer R. B. Stanford, of Hope and District Engineer L. R. Plemmons, of Camden. At that time there was no preliminary survey to indicate where the two ends of the Hope-Camden road would join on the Nevada-Ouachita county line.

This point was determined by the completion of the Ouachita county survey, announced Saturday at Camden by Mr. Plemmons. The Ouachita line is the end of his district. Mr. Stanford's district beginning with Nevada county.

The road from Camden to the Nevada county line, about 20 miles, will be offered for contract on grading and drainage structures May 18, according to Mr. Plemmons.

Cross State Road

Highway No. 4, which is known as the East Arkansas or DeSoto road, is a cross-state road with only one missing link—between Hope and Camden. From Camden it runs through Warren and Monticello to pertinent ferry crossings on the Mississippi river.

No. 4 is the shortest route from Texarkana, and from Oklahoma points to the state of Mississippi.

He was born in Green county, Alabama on March 1, 1864. He graduated from the University of Alabama in 1884 as the youngest full graduate in the history of the University. ## Ripe Strawberries In Horatio Fields

Full Shipping Expected to Be Under Way by April 15

HORATIO, Ark., April 7.—A few ripe strawberries found in the field here during the past few days indicate that the first crop of the season will probably be brought in during the latter part of this week, according to L. O. Shull, sales agent for the Horatio Fruit Growers, Inc., local shipping association. Full shipping should be under way by the 15th.

There are approximately 500 acres in berries in this shipping area this year, and although the crop received some damage from the late frosts, it is expected that from 25 to 45 carloads will be shipped, and the indications point to a fair price this season.

According to Shull the fertilizer sales in this shipping area have exceeded 10,000 bags indicating that the truck growers are planning a more intensive cultivation of their farms. The berry planting, has been estimated to be 500 acres here and this crop will be ready for the market immediately after the strawberries are harvested.

Following the bean crop there will be approximately 800 acres of cucumbers and 100 acres of potatoes marketed here, after which 500 acres of sweet corn, 100 acres of tomatoes and 100 acres of cantaloupes will carry the truck harvesting season through to August 1. Fall beans harvested in September have proven to be successful here, as well as fall squash and corn, which will probably be considerable acreage planted to these crops according to Shull.

The long growing season in this section is a boon to the farmers and merchants alike, as it brings in money practically every month in the year. In addition to the truck crops, 1700 bales of cotton were ginned in Horatio last season, extending the shipping season well into the winter.

The early spring rains have seasoned the ground in this section and good growing conditions are expected for all crops.

1930 Session of Hempstead Court Convenes Today

Grand Jury Empanelled,
Judge Makes Charge
To Jury

BUSH IS NEW JUDGE

Hempstead Bar Association
Draw Resolution for Late Judge McCollum

The April term of the 1930 session of the Hempstead Circuit court opened this morning at Washington, with Judge Dexter Bush on the bench. The Grand jury was empanelled at nine o'clock, and Judge Dexter's charge to the jury, especially stressed the importance to curb law violations. About two hours was spent in memorial services and making resolutions for the late Judge J. H. McCollum.

The lawyers who spoke this morning during the two-hour service were as follows: O. A. Graves, Luke Monroe, Steve Carrigan, H. J. Lemley, U. A. Gentry, John Vesey, W. S. Atkins, E. F. McFadden, Pat Casey and F. T. Stagg all of Hempstead county and J. O. A. Bush and Dexter Bush, of Prescott.

The court adjourned at 12 o'clock until 1 o'clock when the Grand Jury starts work. Dates of a few cases will be set this afternoon.

The following resolution was drawn up by the Hempstead Bar Association:

In the inevitable course of human events, the fellowship of the Bar loses each year men whom it esteems and loves. The temples of democracy will be but as vain vestiges of a vanished faith if their altar fires are not kept burning by the memory of those who have met the supreme test and have laid down their lives in heroic fidelity and self sacrifice. We treasure our remembrance of these men and have the consolation of knowing that even after death their memories endure to stimulate the noble traditions of the profession, and we deem it a sacred privilege to give expression, however inadequate, to the deep affection we hold for our departed brother.

James Hanegan McCollum.

Judge McCollum was born on a farm eight miles northeast of Hope, in Hempstead county, Arkansas on January ninth, 1862, the son of Ambrose B. and Altimira McCollum, natives of Alabama who came to Arkansas in 1849; there he received a common school education followed by a course in Ansley's Academy at Arley, near Prescott.

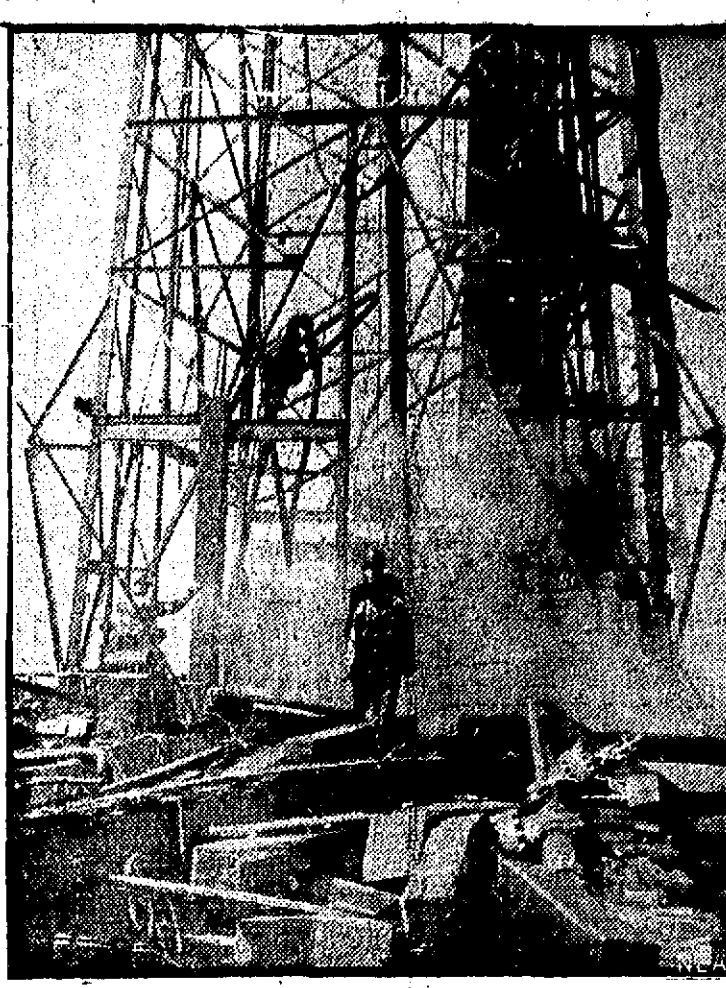

When twenty years of age he entered the law office of the late Captain C. A. Bridewell, and upon his admission to the bar in 1883 formed a partnership with his tutor under the firm name "Bridewell & McCollum." In 1884 he was elected Mayor of Hope, serving one term; in 1890 and again in 1894 he was elected prosecuting attorney of this judicial circuit; he was a member of the 1905 and 1907 sessions of the Arkansas House of Representatives from Hempstead County; in 1922 he was elected Judge of the Eighth Judicial Circuit of Arkansas, which position he filled until his untimely death on March 15th, 1930. During the World War he was county chairman of the American Red Cross. He was a member and officer of the Methodist Episcopal Church and was profoundly penetrated by the Christian faith. He was loyal to his political party, and it was indicative of his fine quality and the contests of politics, rivalries of his profession, the meanness of detractors never made him rancorous. He was true to every trust reposed in him; his life was untainted by cowardice or dishonesty, and if he erred it was on the side of mercy.

As citizens, lawyer, legislator and judge, James Hanegan McCollum attained marked eminence, and was recognized by the Bar, litigants and the public as a man of the highest standards, great refinement, charming personality and transparent honesty. He was incapable of melodramatic pose; he despised hypocrisy; he eschewed formality; there was no subterfuge, no guile, no artifice in him, and he was a stranger to the fear that weaklings know and feel. With him there was no affectation, no puffing from pride of place, and yet, as Judge, he wore about him a quiet grace of dignity, and radiated an influence which lifted his tribunal out of the atmosphere of a mere forensic arena and sanctified it as a Temple of Justice. When he assumed the chair and called the cases of the day, no man, no matter how exalted in position, or great in experience, or however humble in the ranks of the profession, could stand at the bar without feeling that the intellectual giant before him had combined the subtle qualities of love of country, knowledge of law, clearness of vision, and broad-sighted statesmanship with the dignity of high office, and that there would be no trifling in argument or in conduct tolerated at that bar.

As a Judge he was noted for intellectual penetration and power of analysis, carefulness of investigation, clearness of logic, absolute impartiality, and possessed the combined lustre of learning, intelligence and integrity. He was beyond the reach of partisan influence and the sudden gusts of passion; he wrought on in the quiet performance of duty, without fear or favor, relying upon the reverence of the people for the majestic utterance of the law.

Third Cap Placed On Outlaw Gusher

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 7.—(AP)—The Mary Sudik gusher was under control today. It was the third time the crew of workers had succeeded in muzzling the gusher which for 11 days has roared defiance to all the ordinary methods of control.

Twice before since the well came in on March 26, control gates had been attached to the wild gusher only to be quickly eaten away by the pressure of oil and gas, abetted by a tremendous sand blast in the geyser's powerful stream.

The control gate which workmen began placing today was a self-threading die at the connection. Engineers at the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil company, which owns the well, said they believed the new cap would hold.

First a master gate was installed after the well was wild, a 200,000-cubic foot gasser. This soon was eaten out. A heavy oil content of approximately 2,000 barrels hourly then appeared and the gusher was pronounced the largest of its kind in the world.

Then an overshot or Shafer gate was placed on the casing after several futile attempts to get the piece under control in the face of the powerful stream which whipped it about. This cap was made fast early Friday night but after four hours the great pressure and gnawing of sand broke down the barrier and engineers turned the flow loose again.

Instead of bringing into use a 3,000 pound bonnet which some engineers believe would be necessary to take the gusher, the smaller gates used were decided upon.

The well was showing more oil and less gas today. The great geyser, almost black, was visible at a great distance today in sunshine and clear atmosphere. Little of the oil was floating away and it seemed apparent that the heavy sheets of fluid recovered from the well would tax capacity of tanks in the area.

The body of Chester Lewis, aged 28, member of the J. Doug Morgan show which played in this city last week, and who died in a local hospital Saturday afternoon as the result of injuries received in an automobile accident on the Hope-Lewisville road last Friday, was shipped to Mexico, Texas, where he will be buried this afternoon.

Another member of the show, Al Standard, orchestra leader, and leading man in the stage production, who was also hurt in the accident rode the same train with his dead buddy, but did not know that Lewis had succumbed to injuries. Fear that Standard would be grief stricken, and would only hamper his chances of recovery, he was not informed of Lewis' death. Standard was taken to Temple, Texas, where he will be examined by a bone specialist.

T. D. Lewis, a brother of the youth that died, came to Hope from Fort Worth, and accompanied the body of Lewis to Mexico. Besides his brother, the youth is survived by his mother, Mrs. T. D. Lewis, of Fort Worth and two sisters, Mrs. D. McKeig, of Dallas and Mrs. Zim Bryant of Mexico.

The two youths were returning to Hope last Friday after a trip to Lewisville in Standard's Ford roadster. When the two were about six miles from this city, Lewis took the steering wheel, and had only driven about two miles when they passed another car at a high rate of speed, causing Lewis to lose control of the machine which catapulted over an embankment. The car is thought to have turned over twice before stopping.

The injured youths were brought to a local hospital for treatment. Lewis received a crushed chest, a gash about the hip, and suffered internal injuries. The Standard received several broken ribs, a crushed shoulder and a broken pelvis.

The stores destroyed included Fair Store No. 35, Johnson's restaurant, a warehouse and a barber shop, pool hall and pressing shop operated by negroes, and an undertaking shop. Practically none of the goods in the store or warehouse was saved and all fixtures in the other establishments were destroyed.

Firemen were not called until the fire had gained great headway and were compelled to work until after daylight to save the remainder of the block. Mr. Mann said that he valued the buildings at $12,000 and was protected by $7,000 worth of insurance. He announced he would rebuild the buildings at once.

Deputy Sheriff Riley Lewallen, Frank Turner and Alex Partell captured a sixty gallon whiskey still about 10 o'clock Saturday morning, one mile east of upper Red Lake. The officer arrested Manual Rayford, alleged operator of the outfit. Four hundred gallons of mash were found at the still, and was destroyed.

Rayford was brought to Hope where he was given a preliminary hearing in Justice Bright's court and bound over to the Grand Jury.

Body of Slain Man is Buried
Sunday at His Old Home Town

BENTONVILLE, April 7.—(AP)—A fugitive warrant was issued today and a preliminary trial Wednesday in a statutory charge which he claims is a "political frame-up" by wet sympathizers who opposed him in the Democratic primary.

Coroner Higgins, who served the warrant on him, said Ledgerwood would make a $500 bond some time today. The warrant was served on him last Saturday, and he was released on his own recognition.

Sheriff Ledgerwood emphatically denies the charge and asserted he has witness which will help him show that the charge filed against him by Mrs. Tom Randolph are false.

In allegation filed by Mrs. Randolph, sheriff Ledgerwood is to have attacked her while he was taking her home from the county jail where at that time her husband was serving a sentence charge for drunkenness.

Frank May Again Will Run for Clerk

President State Clerks
Ass'n., and Leader in Civic Affairs

Frank May made formal announcement today that he would be a candidate for re-election to the office of county and probate clerk, subject to the action of the Democratic primary August 12.

Mr. May, who started off his public career with 14 years as a school teacher, has been active in county affairs for the past 10 years, and is also widely known over the state.

He has been president of the Arkansas Clerks association for the last two years, and during the winter was mentioned prominently in state political circles as a possible candidate for state treasurer. He determined, however, to seek re-election in his home county.

Mr. May was a resident of Hope for several years, but since his election to the office of clerk has lived in Washington. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club, at Hope; is active in church work, at Washington, and is a member of the famous Washington Male Quartet, one of the best known musical organizations in Hempstead county.

In his formal statement Mr. May says: "In asking for another term as Clerk I want to promise the people of the county even better service than I have given them since I have been in office."

"I know more about the work today than I did. I have systematized the office work so that there is little delay in handling any of the details and I am better fitted in every way to render service."

"I am just recovering from an operation and it may be several weeks before I am able to make a very active campaign, but I want to let my friends in every section of the county know now that I am a candidate for re-election and that I want their support."

Lynn Smith Stresses Dairying

Urges Farmers to Plant
Less Cotton and Grow
Dairy Feed

While butter fat prices just now are not as favorable as they have been in the past, the man who is milking cows has nothing to fear according to County Agent Lynn Smith.

Dairying, where a market is furnished as good as that furnished by the Kraft Cheese Plant, is safer than cotton. The cow is merely a place to market feed. By feeding her plenty of cheap feed of the proper quality she will pay a dividend on his feed if she is a well bred cow.

Growing this feed will improve the soil. Legume hays, pastures, etc., increase soil fertility, and for this reason every land owner should be anxious to have the men who are farming his land milk cows.

Competition in the Dairy Business is keen, but we have advantages here which are decidedly in our favor, as compared to the man further north. A wise way to reduce cotton acreage is to plant only the best land, and grow abundant feed on the poor marginal lands and feed this to Dairy cows. Cheap home-grown feeds are the secret in profitable milk production.

One Hundred Cars Radishes Shipped

Ten Days Will End The Biggest Radish Harvest In History

Within ten days left to harvest the late radishes and turnip greens the biggest crop that has ever been harvested in northern Hempstead county will come to a close.

One hundred cars have been shipped from the various points along the Ry, N. W. Ry. Blevins and Dunlap lines about even on the cars shipped with McCaskill, and Arcadia following. No radishes were bought at Dearyville the past week due to the sharp decline in its market the fore part of the week.

Turnip and mustard greens are now being harvested along with the late crop of radishes, but the prices in these commodities are low. However there was a small acreage planted in green this season.

It is not known just what the big crop will be in dollars and cents but the growers estimate they have made $100,000 this season.

The ground now being plowed for the sowing of cantalope and water melons. The growers state there will be a larger acreage of cantalope this year lessening the production of cotton.

Our Poultry Column

Edited by Prof. Frederic H. Stoneburn

Without charge, our readers may secure expert personal advice on poultry topics. Address inquiries to Southern Poultry Bureau, Box 720, Memphis, Tenn.

State your problem fully; enclose stamped self-addressed envelope.

LATE my mail has contained many requests for information regarding that highly destructive disease of growing chicks which we know as coccidiosis. This is, perhaps, the most destructive of all chick disorders, but fortunately it can be largely prevented by the use of strict sanitary measures.

Coccidiosis usually appears when chicks are four to six weeks of age, though in many cases apparently healthy ten-week chicks may develop the trouble. The early symptoms are droopiness and sleepiness, the affected chicks remaining near the brooder with heads drawn in, eyes closed and wings hanging. Diarrhea usually develops and blood frequently appears in the droppings. In some cases a whitish or even bloody material forms in the eyes.

THE affected chicks usually begin to die three or four days after the symptoms appear. The infection is severe the greatest mortality will usually be experienced within a period of two weeks. But if the infection is rather light, a chronic condition may develop and individuals will die at intervals until the pullets are practically ready to go into laying pens. The surviving birds, though apparently healthy, are unthrifty and consequently unprofitable. They may, too, become carriers of the disease and perpetuate it on the plant. Mature birds may be infected without showing indications of the disease, due to greater powers of resistance.

Post mortem examinations of the affected birds disclose the following conditions: The caeca, or blind pouches at the lower end of the intestine, are usually greatly expanded and filled with bloody material or a cheesy substance, yellowish in color. Small whitish spots may be noted on the walls of the caeca and intestines. The surface of the liver may be spotted or show sunken, irregular pits.

A SINGLE-celled parasite (a coccidium), round or oval in shape, is the cause of the disease. The coccidia can not be seen with the naked eye but can easily be observed with a microscope. They attack and practically destroy the inner surface of the intestines, checking their work of absorbing food and commonly causing hemorrhages. The rate of mortality, consequently, varies with the number of coccidia present in the intestines. And it is interesting to note that coccidia are especially troublesome in flocks infected with round worms.

Coccidiosis never develops unless the parasite is present. But if it is, overcrowding, dampness, improper feeding and faulty care will all tend to lower the natural resistance of the chicks and make infection easier.

A KNOWLEDGE of the life history of this tiny parasite makes clear the reasons why certain control measures are effective. The eggs of the coccidia are passed out with the droppings of birds which are infected. These eggs are not then capable of causing the disease. They must first "ripen" for forty-eight hours or more in the presence of heat and moisture. They are then in condition to cause the disease in any chick which swallows them, and such birds may discharge millions of these eggs.

The eggs are very tough and difficult to kill. They can apparently remain dangerous for one to two years in poultry buildings or in the soil. So the disease may persist for years on an infected plant. The secret of avoiding the disease is to prevent the infection from reaching the chicks.

HAVE the brooder house and equipment clean. Start the chicks in battery brooders, for three weeks, or on wire floors in the brooder house. Any infected droppings will then fall through, out of reach of the brood. Or clean the brooder house every two or three days until the danger passes.

Keep the brooder house floor dry. Dampness is necessary to the ripening process of the eggs. Because of this the drinking vessels should be set on wire-covered frames to prevent the chicks from getting at damp litter about the fountain.

Give the chicks range on clean, uninfected ground. Or provide "sun porches," covered outside yards with floors of netting, boards or cement. These should be cleaned every two or three days.

If the disorder appears, instantly remove the sick chicks from the brood to prevent them from infecting the healthy individuals. It is good practice to kill these, and burn their bodies. If retained, place them in coops with wire floors.

THERE is apparently no drug which will overcome the trouble. Best results follow the use of the milk treatment, using either liquid buttermilk or skim-milk or powdered milk.

Should the disease appear, and a supply of liquid milk is available, keep the milk before the brood continuously, using either earthen, glass or tin vessels. Do not give water. Provide plenty of drinking space and prevent the chicks from getting their feet into the milk. Feed nothing but milk aside from a small amount of scratch grains night and morning. When the symptoms disappear, gradually start mash feeding and reduce the milk supply.

When using powdered milk, use this in the mash ration at the rate of 30 to 40 per cent. That is, 30 to 40 pounds of milk with 70 to 60 pounds of mash. Provide plenty of hoppers space so all chicks may eat at will. Feed little if any scratch grains.

As the disease disappears, make a gradual reduction in the milk until the content of the mash, taking about two weeks to return to the regular ration.

Coccidiosis can be prevented and controlled. But one must carefully apply the necessary methods of sanitation and feeding to accomplish this. Half-way measures simply won't do. (Copyrighted by International Sugar Feed Co., Memphis.)

Menu For the Family

BY SISTER MARY

NBA Service Writer

ALTHOUGH mutton is very popular in England, comparatively few American families use it. Lamb is steadily gaining in favor, but it usually is high in price and not practicable for everyday family use.

Carefully prepared and cooked mutton is a truly delicious dish, stronger flavored than lamb but tender and fine grained. Since it is not expensive and is nourishing, it is excellent for family meals. The fat gives the rather strong flavor so many people object to, so careful and thorough trimming is essential.

The dinner menu below uses mutton to advantage in a combination with vegetables. The menu for the entire day is well balanced and nourishing. No out-of-season foods are suggested, since economy is an important feature.

BREAKFAST—Stewed rhubarb, cereal, cream, salt codfish balls, cornmeal muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Cress and potato soup with grated cheese, toast sticks, pineapple and carrot salad, whole wheat bread, ginger cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER—Casserole of mutton, spaghetti in tomato sauce, new radishes and onions, cottage pudding with maple sauce, milk, coffee.

Casserole of Mutton

One slice mutton one inch thick, 1 cup white turnip balls or cubes, 1 cup potato marbles, 1 cup carrot marbles, 1-2 cup tiny onions, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 cups boiling water or stock, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 teaspoon celery seed.

Choose a slice of mutton from the upper part of the leg. Trim and pan broil until half done or broil six minutes on one side and turn and broil six minutes on the other side. Put into a hot, well-greased casserole and add vegetables. Stir butter and flour together until perfectly blended. Add with seasoning to stock or water and bring to the boiling point, stirring to make smooth. Pour over meat and vegetables in casserole, cover and cook in a moderate oven until vegetables are tender, about 50 minutes.

Grated raw carrot and crushed or shredded pineapple are combined in a jelly made of the pineapple juice "pepped up" with lemon juice for the luncheon salad.

A little sugar may be needed to blend the flavors smoothly. This is an excellent salad for children.

One egg is used both for the cottage pudding and for the sauce. The yolk is used for the pudding and the white for the sauce. To make the sauce, cook 1 cup of maple syrup until a few drops tried in cold water hold their shape but are very soft if picked up in the fingers. Slowly beat into white of egg well beaten. Heat until cool and serve.

Murder Backstairs

©1930 by NEA SERVICE INC

by ANNE AUSTIN AUTHOR OF "THE AVENGING PARROT," "THE BLACK PIGEON," ETC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DORIS MATTHEWS, lady's maid, is murdered in a summer house on the Berkeley estate, by Mrs. George Berkeley, who is given Mrs. Berkeley's name by Seymour Crosby, engaged to CLORINDA BUCKLEY, whose scarf binds the rock-ribbed body when it is taken from the lake by DETECTIVE DUNDUE.

Seriously injured, Mrs. Berkeley, DICK BERKELEY, EDGEMOORE ARNOLD, chauffeur, Doris's name, CLORINDA BUCKLEY, and an undoubtedly splendid evening Friday evening with perfume from Mrs. Berkeley's room, placed in Mrs. Berkeley's room by WICKETT, butler, formerly employed by Mrs. LAMBERT, now Mrs. Berkeley.

An unbroken line of Doris to her sister in London links the murder with the ancient of PLYMOUTH COLLEGE, where Mrs. Berkeley's mother, Mrs. Berkeley, is a teacher, and Doris's mother, Mrs. Berkeley, is a teacher.

CLORINDA BUCKLEY, then her mistress, is months before. CAPTAIN STRAWN, ready to arrest Crosby, who he believes responsible for his wife's death and the maid's murder, considers the latter case the purchase of a heavy ring, a robbery of the house, and sets out for Johnson, leaving Dundee in charge.

Buchanan, Dundee quivers Mrs. Lambert on the death of Doris Crosby, Doris's former mistress, who Mrs. Lambert insists was killed, exonerating Crosby, says she knows nothing, then her mistress's murder, but cannot recall Doris's murder, or any other theory reflecting on Doris's character. But, Dundee, under his nose, GEORGE BERKELEY's type writer to transcribe the notes on the murder and discover the truth, proving Berkeley had been writing a letter to his lawyer regarding the purchase of a heavy ring to be run by Doris. He tells himself why had Berkeley not pushed that letter?

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

Why had George Berkeley not finished that letter? That question had just crashed through Dundee's almost dazed brain when there came a knock upon the door. He opened it to find Wickett gingerly holding a large bird cage, in which Cap'n crouched upon his perch, every feather ruffled indignantly.

"A policeman brought this, sir. He says you wanted it, sir."

"Right, Wickett," Dundee laughed. "Hello, Cap'n. I told you I might send for you," and he reached into the cage to stroke the yellow-and-green head soothingly.

"He nipped me, sir, when I tried to do that," Wickett offered sadly. "I'm afraid he's a one-man bird," Dundee grinned. "By the way, Wickett, I'd rather you did not mention the parrot. I don't care to get a reputation for being eccentric."

"Yes, sir. Thank you, sir," Wickett said, as he pocketed, with much dignity, the $5 bill which Dundee had slipped into his hand. "One more thing, Wickett," Dundee detained him. "Was Mr. Berkeley at home yesterday afternoon?"

"Oh, no, sir. He returned from his business at the usual time—half-past five."

"Do you know whether Mrs. Berkeley told him of the little scene between Arnold, Doris and Mr. Dick?" Dundee asked casually.

"I couldn't say, sir."

"Then, do you know whether Mr. Berkeley spent some time with Mrs. Berkeley before dinner?"

"Yes, sir. A messenger boy arrived about six with a large envelope for Mr. Berkeley. He was there when Mrs. Berkeley rang me on the house telephone to ask me to come up for some instructions regarding dinner, sir."

"And they had been quarrelling, Wickett?"

The butler hesitated, and instinctively looked over his shoulder. Then, lowering his voice, he confided: "Yes, sir. It seemed to be about Mr. Crosby, sir. I gathered that the envelope contained a report of some sort, concerning Mr. Crosby."

"Now, Wickett, tell me: Did Mr. Berkeley send for Doris or see Doris after his return from his office yesterday?"

"Yes, sir. A few minutes before the messenger arrived. He asked me to send her to him in the library, sir."

"Did he seem—well, angry?"

"No, sir. He seemed much as usual, sir, but Mr. Berkeley is always a stern man. She was with him for a few minutes only."

"Did you see her or talk with her after she left Mr. Berkeley?"

"I saw her, sir, as she was going upstairs to get Mr. Berkeley dressed for dinner, but I did not detain her."

"Then Doris was with Mrs. Berkeley when your master and mistress were quarrelling over Mr. Crosby's engagement to Miss Clorinda?"

"Yes, sir."

After a moment of reflection, Dundee asked abruptly: "Just when was it that Mr. Berkeley wrote letters on the typewriter in his room yesterday?"

"I can't say that he wrote letters at all, sir, but Mr. Berkeley was writing on his machine when I went in his room about a quarter to seven to ask for the key to the wine cellar, sir."

"Did he later give you any letters to send to the post office?"

"No, sir. Arnold went to the post office with some letters Mrs. Lambert gave me to have mailed, but they did not include one written by Mr. Berkeley."

Again Dundee considered for a long minute, frowningly. Then: "Wickett, did Doris tell you, or did you observe for yourself, that Mr. George Berkeley was—well, in love with her?"

Wickett looked profoundly shocked and indignant. "Certainly not, sir!"

"Was that denial a shade too emphatic to be taken at its face value?" Dundee asked himself, after the butler had been dismissed. And then he remembered that his "Watson" was with him, that it was no longer necessary to keep his thoughts to himself.

"What do you think, 'my dear Watson'?" he addressed the parrot, poking him to attention. "Does it strike you as entirely absurd that a middle-aged, virile, handsome man, not at all in love with his impossible wife, should be more than a trifle indiscreet with his wife's lovely maid?"

Cap'n turned slowly on his perch and drooped a paperish-white lid. "Exactly!" Dundee laughed. "But, 'my dear Watson,' Mrs. Lambert and Wickett are most anxious not to have us think that Doris was 'that kind of girl!' But what other explanation can there be for this letter which George Berkeley tore up before it was finished? What any you, Watson? Did George Berkeley, multi-millionaire, suddenly decide to be damned before he'd pay blackmail and—to insure the girl's silence in another way?"

CAP'n's sole answer was a throaty chuckle.

"Probably you're right, Watson," Dundee agreed lugubriously. "I should say he is!" a vigorous, indignant young voice cried from the bathroom door.

"Gigi! You outrageous little snapper!" Dundee went to the girl, seized her by the arms and shook her. "You're a blight—and I ought to spank you."

"So many people feel that way about me," Gigi mourned. "But I wasn't eavesdropping intentionally. Dick sent me up to get him a package of his special cigarettes and I heard you talking through the open door into the bathroom. Thought you'd gone crazy and were talking to yourself. But why do you want to talk to a silly old parrot, when you could use me for a Watson? I at least could say, 'Marvelous, my dear Holmes—'"

"Oh, would you?" Dundee mocked. "You would laugh at every theory I trotted out."

"Yes, if they were all as silly as the ones I've heard so far," she agreed cheerfully. "Tell you what—I'll be the detective and spin a theory myself. . . . Sit down!" she commanded suddenly, in an excellent imitation of Captain Strawn's most official and officious voice. "I'm going to put you through the third degree!"

Rather to his own surprise, Dundee obeyed.

"When did you last see Doris Matthews?" she began belligerently.

"Last night, at about half-past 10?" Dundee answered promptly, grinning. "Your brother Dick was forcing her to dance with him in the back hall, as well as forcing her to promise to meet him later."

"When did you first see Doris Matthews?" Gigi went on sternly.

"At the same time," Dundee answered.

"Mr. Dundee, do you know an English gentleman named Sir Edward Moresby?" Gigi started him by asking.

"Yes, I do. I was in his home several times when I worked in Scotland Yard, of which he is a department head."

"And Kathryn Matthews, sister of Doris Matthews, works for Lady Moresby, does she not?" Gigi demanded, with lifted eyebrows.

"Yes. What of it?" Dundee asked, mystified.

"Just this, Mr. 'Dennie' Dundee!" Gigi retorted, with exaggerated significance. "Doris herself told me that she sometimes called on her sister at Sir Edward's house in London. Was that where you met, fell in love with and led Doris Matthews astray?"

"Don't be an idiot, Gigi!" Dundee commanded sternly.

"Everyone seems to think that's a perfect retort to anything I say," Gigi complained in her natural voice. Then, becoming Captain Strawn again, she said slowly, heavily: "Mr. James Dundee, let me tell you the story of this murder as I see it:

"YOU did know Doris Matthews in England. You did fall in love with her. When Dick failed you to this house yesterday, you had no idea of course that you would see your old flame here. To your intense surprise and consternation, you come upon her in the back hall, in another man's arms! Jealous, or frightened at what she might tell on you, I can't say which—"

"I should think you couldn't!" Dundee laughed.

"That's right—laugh while the laughing's good!" Gigi retorted sternly. "You are in a panic. You telephone to Police Headquarters, cannily planting suspicion against Seymour Crosby, for a crime which has not been committed yet. When you go upstairs, it is not to sleep the sleep of the just, but to plan a dastardly crime! Your room is on the third floor. You waylay Doris, hear from her that she is to meet Arnold in the summerhouse. She says she will tell her fiancé the truth about you and that he will kill you! But you know Arnold cannot meet her, that he is taking the Smiths home. And it is you who keep that try!"

"That's good, all right," Dundee laughed admiringly.

"Good! It's perfect!" Gigi corrected him. "You have admitted that you stole downstairs, that you heard Clorinda unbolt the back door. And circumstance was playing into your hands! Here was another suspect made to order! On your way out, you pick up Clorinda's scarf which she has dropped while unbolting the door. A means of strangling the girl, if the flask of perfume which you have stolen from Abbie's room doesn't prove an effective weapon. That weapon you have chosen with the cunning of the devil. You know that any spilled perfume cannot betray you, since it has been sprinkled upon everyone in the drawing room. You know, too, that it will implicate any one of three others—Crosby, who gave it to Abbie, Wickett who took it upstairs, or Abbie in whose room it had been left. Then there is the scarf to implicate poor Clorinda. . . . Well!" she snapped, as Strawn might have done.

"I can only say, 'Captain Strawn,'" Dundee protested with mock solemnity, "that it is all lies, lies! I did not kill Doris Matthews!"

"So you say!" she scoffed. Then, dropping suddenly into her own voice and manner and seizing his hands, she cried: "I know you didn't kill her, Bonnie Dundee! I know that's an idiotic theory! But, oh, don't you see? It's so easy to build up theories against almost anyone who was in this house last night!"

"I grant you that, Gigi," Dundee answered soberly.

"Then you won't be an idiot? Gigi begged. "You won't go off half-cocked and suspect Dad and Abbie and Clorinda and Mrs. Lambert and Wickett—and me?"

"I promise," Dundee answered, with real solemnity. "Will you get out now and let me work?"

Dairy Products Take Slump Here

Advertising Must be Considered if Industry is to Continue Profitable

"If foreign vegetable oils have gained in per capita consumption in the United States in recent months, it seems that the dairy industry has not been as alert to its opportunities as it might have been. Surely people could all prefer butter if they knew and were constantly reminded of its high nutritional value, its digestibility, its wholesomeness and fine flavor. Advertising, however, is moving the nation today. No matter how excellent a product may be it is not advertised, its sale will drop below that of a highly-advertised, cheaper, and in less unity in their ranks. Their laxity is not only costly to themselves, but to every branch of the dairy industry, as a slump in one product necessarily affects all others. As a matter of fact, it is the farmer who is most seriously affected, whether he produces milk for the fluid-milk market, for cheesemaking, or for condensing of cream for butter-making or ice cream. It is the farmer who should see to this advertising by setting aside a small fraction of a cent from the price of his butterfat toward letting the world know of the superiority of his product through organizations like the National Dairy Council. This small investment would bear great dividends and besides would be an excellent contribution toward the furtherance of the nation's health."

As Shaun Goilin Won the Grand National

It was a great day for "wearing of the green" at the classic Grand National Steeplechase in Antree, England. ## HOOKS AND SLIDES

by William Braucher

A Couple of Guys
Named John McGraw
 THERE are two people managing the New York Giants (this year). They are separate and distinct personalities. They are as unlike each other as Connie Mack and Gabby Street. The name of each of these people is John Joseph McGraw. Let me explain.

When I arrived in San Antonio to see the Giants and White Sox in their training camp, a game was in progress between the two teams. They played along pretty even for four or five innings. In the eighth the Sox managed to punch a run across the plate on one of the young pitchers.

It was at this moment I chose to see McGraw, and I'll never make the same mistake again. I came around the corner of the bench and peeked in, and there sat McGraw, former peanut butter and ball player, his hat tilted, his eyes squinted as he peered out over the playing field.

"Mr. McGraw," I began, but he looked up sharply and interrupted.

"See me after while at the hotel," he said, with a wave of his hand. "I'm busy with a ball game now." And his eyes turned out to the diamond again where the White Sox were punching across the run that won the game.

That was all, there wasn't any more than just that.

But That Evening—Ah!!
 THAT evening I went to the hotel to meet him. His welcome was just as unexpected as his curt dismissal from the bench had been. He was hospitable, beamy, "Come on up to the room and we'll talk about the team," he said, "and you can ask me a lot of questions I can't answer."

On the way we met George Burns, the veteran outfielder, and George came along. McGraw began to expand, "See how Ott runs the fence today to grab that ball," he started, "with his back to the plate . . . didn't even have his head turned over his shoulder . . . turned at just the right second to grab the ball . . . just like Speaker in the old days and did you see Travis Jackson back up that play at third and turn an error into a put-out? . . . sweet shortstop . . . he win a lot of ball games for us."

(McGraw, in the style of the ball player, never says, "wins" for present tense or "won" for past. It is always "win.")

"They say Glenn Wright is throwing again . . . well, collisions like that are tough luck . . . we had a lot of tough luck last year . . . bad weather right at the start of the season always hurts a team . . . they get out of condition . . . remember, the time, George, when Josh Devore runs into the fence down in Pittsburgh? . . . old Merkle is down in Daytona, I understand . . . nice fellow, Merkle."

Referee in 60th Year
Once Fought 77 Rounds
 ST. LOUIS, April 7.—(AP)—Harry Sharpe, boxer who a generation ago fought a record bout of 77 rounds, is still connected with the ring despite his 60 years. Now, however, Sharpe is a referee and he has been the third man in the ring in hundreds of fights the last 29 years.

For 41 years Sharpe has been identified with boxing in the midwest during which time he held the championship of Missouri in the lightweight class for seven years; fought the reigning lightweight champion, Jack McAuliffe to a draw; exchanged blows with dozens of fighters in Missouri and surrounding states, in addition to his winning the record 77 round fight, and his work as a referee. Sharpe ended his ring career in 1901 and immediately became a referee. He served during the world war, and after the armistice was signed it was Sharpe who refereed the fight in which Gene Tunney defeated Ted Jamison for the light heavyweight championship of the E. A. F. F.

To Sharpe boxing is first and last a sport and cleanliness of the game is sacred. He is particularly interested in assisting young boxers just starting their careers.

Lack of Large Stadium Now Worries S. M. U.

DALLAS, April 17.—(AP)—Cancellation of plans for a large state fair stadium here has placed Southern Methodist university in an unusual position.

Some time ago the state fair of Texas proposed to erect a structure that would seat 80,000 persons, and the Mustangs on the strength of it booked important grid games for the coming season, notably one with the University of Indiana.

Now plans for the oval have been dropped, and the Indiana-S. M. U. game will have to be played in the old fair park stadium which seats some 16,000.

Merry Chase Seen in Dixie League; Birmingham After Third Flag in Row

ATLANTA, April 7.—(AP)—Two chronic second-division clubs have been thoroughly overhauled and every squad in the loop has been materially strengthened, so Southern Association fans are looking for a close and sizzling pennant race this year.

Half of the teams have new managers and three have new owners. Clyde Milan, former Washington player and scout, replaced Johnny Dobbis at Birmingham when Dobbis signed with the Atlanta Crackers. "Wild Bill" Rodgers left the Pacific Coast to manage Chattanooga, and Jimmy Hamilton deserted Canton, Ohio, to become Mobile boss.

Hamilton bought the Alabama club and Joe Engle, former Senator scout obtained the Chattanooga franchise. A group of 12 business men, including Bobby Jones, purchased the Crackers. Birmingham, winner of the pennant the past two years is shooting at its third consecutive flag, a feat never accomplished in the loop. Practically the same team that won the bunting last year and went on to whip the Dallas Steers, Texas league champs, in the Dixie series will be back again.

Nashville, Memphis and Atlanta are looked upon as the clubs that will give the Barons the hardest run. But Little Rock, Chattanooga, Mobile and New Orleans threaten to kick up a fuss.

New Orleans is regarded as the question mark. The Pelicans enter the race under the gloom of the suicide of Alexander J. Heineman, their president for 16 years, and must find replacements for eight players they lost.

"The Hoodoo" Was Presented Friday

Junior Class Play Draws Large Crowd to City Hall Auditorium

"The Hoodoo," the Junior play, was presented at the city hall auditorium Friday night. About 21 members of the class took part in the play, which was one of the best ever staged by a class of Hope High school.

The scene was laid at the country home of Mrs. Ferrington-Shine. The occasion was a house party at the wedding of Amy Lee and Brighton Early. Much trouble came about for the groom, for Billy Jackson, the heart-breaker, and for Professor Solomon Spigot, an authority on Egypt, which brought about humorous situations.

Aunt Paradise, the colored cook, played her role exceptionally well.

Wilma Banky Coming in "A Lady to Love"

Wilma Banky, Hungarian film star, and Victor Seastrom, director of such outstanding cinema achievements as "The Scarlet Letter" and "He Who Gets Slapped," will make a joint entrance into the all-talking picture field when Miss Banky's starring vehicle, "A Lady to Love," is shown at the Saenger Tuesday.

Although Miss Banky spoke a few lines in her last picture, "This Is Heaven," the new production will be her first all-talking endeavor. Mr. Seastrom, on the other hand, has confined his directorial activities heretofore entirely to the silent screen and it is expected his first audible work will be looked forward to with considerable interest.

It's wise to choose a SIX!

After all, it is a perfectly simple matter to decide which automobile to buy. Only two questions must be answered to your satisfaction—

First: Which car gives the most for my money?

Second: Which car represents the soundest investment in satisfaction and pride of ownership?

In buying a low-priced car consider the following facts:

It is wise to choose a six-cylinder motor—for six cylinders are necessary to take out vibration and roughness. Six-cylinder smoothness will save the motor, the whole chassis, the body, the passengers, and the driver.

The Chevrolet is a six. And yet it sells at a price that anyone can afford to pay.

This very low-priced car lasts longer, not only because of fine materials and oversize parts, but also because it is a six. Its big, smooth, 50-horsepower six-cylinder engine is always "taking it easy." There is no feeling of strain at any speed.

With all its six-cylinder smoothness and power the New Chevrolet Six uses no extra gasoline or oil. Efficient design makes this possible—overhead valves—high compression power from any fuel—very latest high-acceleration carburetor—close-fitting, long-wearing pistons—crankcase ventilation—air cleaner. You can really have extreme economy and still satisfy your ideal of truly modern transportation.

Chevrolet economy is also the mark of Chevrolet sincerity in manufacture. To illustrate:

Chevrolet valves are readily accessible and adjustable. This saves replacing valves, and also makes it possible to preserve efficiency.

A similar example is found in Chevrolet's molded brake lining—reducing the necessity of frequent replacement, and consequent expense.

Furthermore, there is a rear axle inspection plate on the new Chevrolet Six. This makes it unnecessary to take the axle apart to examine it or clean it.

The Chevrolet Six is full of such evidence that true motor car economy comes from advancement and refinement.

Like the finest cars, the Chevrolet Six provides the comfort and protection of four springs controlled by hydraulic shock absorbers. They are mounted lengthwise, in the direction of car travel, and self-adjusting spring shackles maintain level.

With modern low suspension and extra wheelbase, the Chevrolet Six has excellent proportions.

Its impressive front view is distinguished by the genuine honeycomb radiator, another mark of modern cars.

The gasoline tank is in the rear, for safety and finer appearance.

Chevrolet beauty instantly says "Body by Fisher"—costly car style, with the permanent quiet of Fisher composite steel-and-wood construction.

Body by Fisher also gives you a genuine non-glare windshield, adjustable driver's seat, more space, deeper cushions, clearer vision, finer fabrics and fittings.

There is just as much extra value everywhere in the car. BY ANY STANDARD the Chevrolet Six is the greatest value in the low-price field.

It is wise to choose the Chevrolet Six with its six-cylinder valve-in-head motor . . . with full scientific equipment . . . with its Body by Fisher . . . with four long semi-elliptic springs, long wheelbase, low suspension, rear-mounted gasoline tank, honeycomb radiator and all the many other features of this day and age.

See your nearest Chevrolet dealer today and drive a Chevrolet Six. Ten minutes at the wheel will show you what a remarkable difference six cylinders make.
